War In Bosnia
through Children's Eyes

Exhibit
January 15 – April 21, 1995

INTRODUCTION

This exhibit of thirty two original paintings, drawings and prints, illustrates images of the War in Bosnia as seen through children's eyes.

Burning houses, destruction, loss of life, and relocation of entire families from their land and homes are all subjects in art works produced by the children who had been eyewitnesses of this insane war created by the outside forces in the name of the new world order.

In addition to the physical losses, the children were able to express visually the feelings of fear, horror sadness and desperation. With a few strokes of a brush, a peeping child's eyes mirror a horror of the scene he witnesses over the fence; a family seated in front of their burning house, reflect utter desperation of an uncertain future; a girl, alone, with her meager possessions stands in front of a fork in the road marked with a question mark; a big heart creaked in the middle tells us about sorrow and sadness for the loved ones. But, throughout these sad images, there is a ray of hope expressed with pictures of doves, rainbows, sun rises and bright colours.

An estimated 150.000 displaced Serbian children from Bosnia and Croatia now live as refugees in Serbia. This exhibit which comes from New York City tells their story. The children artists range from ages 9 to 14.
